

I'm a paying subscriber to XM Satellite Radio. Note the keywords "paying subscriber". I pay for the services I receive. Now explain to me, how you, the FCC, as a government agency, can come in and take away or limit those services? Don't we as United States citizens and consumers have any rights anymore? Aren't we part of a Free Market system that encourages competition and trade? In this case, how is the government encouraging competition when it takes away a service offered by a satellite provider to paying customers? Are the free market ideals that encourage entrepreneurial endeavors and that have made this country what it is blatantly cast aside when the lobbyists and private interest groups line your pockets with "donations"? Please. Stop the madness. I want my XM just the way it is. Don't ruin a good thing. Don't be a hindrance to free trade and entertainment. Thank you.
